Artist Robert Irwin, who is known for his pioneering experimentations with light and space, will have his first solo exhibition with the Los Angeles-based gallery Kayne Griffin Corcoran in September, the same month he will turn 92 years old. Kayne Griffin Corcoran's work with Irwin will be pursued in collaboration with Pace Gallery, which has long represented the artist. "One cannot have a conversation about the post-war Southern California art scene without acknowledging the seminal contributions Irwin made to this chapter in art history," the gallery's founding partner Maggie Kayne said in a statement.
